CHILDREN'S ACROBATIC CLASSES will be held at First Society during spring vacation by Carol Busc, a qualified instructor. Carol was a performing acrobat through high school, and has taught in Minnesota, Pennsylvania, and Madison. Classes will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday mornings, April 16-18. Students in 4th grade and up are scheduled for 9-9:45 AM (Cost: $6), and those in 1st-3rd grade from 10-10:30 AM (Cost: $5). Classes will be limited to ten students, so early registration is advised. Obtain applications from First Society or from Elaine Naughton, 5608 Crestwood Place (238-2863).
I'd like to thank you on behalf of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the 3,000 Farah strikers for the help you've offered during the Caravan campaign. This strike and the people involved are very important to Americans everywhere because the entire experience has proven once again that Americans refuse to be divided, men against women, Chicano against Anglo, rich against poor, blue collar against white collar. It's been a true step toward social justice and responsibility which is so necessary to the continued progress of our culture.

Without your help, and the help of others, like yourselves, our victory couldn't have been possible.

THE SOCIAL ACTION COMMITTEE has made two more "Prairie Recognition" awards. A check for $60 and a letter of appreciation went to the BLUE BUS, located at 222 N. Bassett Street, in which nurses, doctors, and medical students treat venereal disease, free of charge and free from the social stigma often associated with such disease. The Blue Bus has been treating approximately 25 Madison citizens per night for over 4 years, and operates only with the financial help of groups such as ours. Our gift will be used to help buy a centrifuge they have needed for a long time.

The second award goes to JACK OSTERAS in appreciation for his tremendous personal effort in instigating and maintaining PROJECT FRESH START. For the past few years Jack has trained and guided teenage boys, many of whom are school drop-outs and have arrest records. Jack finds homes that need remodeling, then trains the boys to do the work. In acquiring skills such as carpentry and brick-laying, the boys gain the experience needed to find jobs or the motivation to reenter school. Jack has not only greatly helped the boys involved, and the people who acquire the houses, but the entire Madison community. The Social Action Committee sends to Jack its sincere thanks and a check for $25.

NOTICE: The McEtreath's are looking for a house to rent by June 30th in the area affectionately known as the "Prairie Ghetto." If you hear of one (unfurnished), let them know about it, or let it know about them.
EDITORIAL: YOUR AUTOMOBILE: SERVANT OR MASTER

Do you own a VW Beetle, or another of the small cars costing under $3000 and getting 25 or more miles per gallon on the highway? If so, then you're in luck. That next trip to Milwaukee (177 miles, round trip) will only cost you $21.24, or $17.59 more than the round trip bus fare. Of course, for the extra money, you are buying the dubious convenience of seeking and finding a close, safe, and advantageous parking spot once you arrive, so it's well worth the extra cost, at the rate of 12 cents a mile.

If, on the other hand, you own a luxury car with all the modern conveniences, such as automatic transmission, power steering, power brakes, air conditioning, and a few electrical gadgets; maybe you ought to think twice before taking off. The operating cost of a car priced at $5-6,000 and getting 10-13 m.p.g. on the highway is $.20 per mile, and that little junket to Milwaukee is going to cost you $35.40, or the price of 9½ round trip bus tickets. However, since all of us don't drive to Milwaukee, you might like to know that if you drive to Ella's on Sunday, the tab is $.50-80. If you drive to Chicago, it's between $36 and $60 (ouch! Did you ever think of flying; it's cheaper) and if you should ever decide to drive to New York, the cost is $360 without the tolls or extras. You would have to carry two other passengers to break even, which would allow for stopover at a cheap motel--provided no one stopped to eat along the way.

How many miles do you put on your car in a week? If it's approximately 200 miles, you're not doing a great deal of driving, but it's costing you $25-$40 per week. At the risk of really turning your hair white, I might mention that you can also figure the cost of your automobile on a daily average rather than on a mileage basis. Using this computation, you will find that it costs you $4-6 every time you park your car in the office parking lot for its daily eight hour rest period.

In case you'd like to verify these figures, they are predicated on driving a distance of 100,000 miles over a ten year period (if you don't drive that distance over that length of time before trade-in, adjust the figures upwards accordingly), and include initial cost, interest, fuel, insurance, maintenance, parking, and state and federal taxes. You might also check the Federal Highway Administration pamphlet entitled, "Cost of Operating an Automobile." Or, better yet, if you've got the courage (my figures and the government's are on the conservative side), keep a record of every penny you spend on your automobile from purchase to demise. I did, and discovered that the 1962 VW for which I paid only $1200 in cash and operated under economic savings (as an overseas civilian employee of the government) which you could not possibly approximate, had cost me $9360 at the end of nine years, or $20 for each and every week I had owned it.

Does this make you wonder whether the love affair we carry on with our automobiles is really love . . . or a form of indentured servitude? And . . . who is the master of whom?

THE SOCIAL ACTION COMMITTEE has given a new school bell to the children at Portal Foster Center, to replace the one that was so dramatically "wiped" a few weeks ago by a mob of misguided marauders. The bell is used for fire drills, etc. and has often been heard by Prairie members on Sunday mornings, summoning the holy to prayers.

FLASH!! Please note, as word reached us too late to squeeze all the information on the Calendar, that there will be a PROGRAM COMMITTEE meeting early in April, on Tuesday, the 8th, at 7:30, at the Parrishes' house, 302 Glenway. Any questions, call Chairman Terri Laurence, 233-7385.
